Chinese Capture Port Of Nanning; Yanks Gain On Mindanao, Luzon

south of the Kokuba river a mile and a half south of Shuri.

That new line already was being outflanked on the east, however, by an American seventh division column which was striking down the coast against meager resistance.

The column seized a 300-foot escarpment overlooking the beaches of southern Okinawa after killing perhaps 2,000 Japanese in a three-day battle, then drove on another 2,500 yards to Ogusuku town, two and a half miles south of the port of Yonabaru.

Push Ahead In Naha

Marines of the sixth division on the west coast pushed another 500 yards through the rubble of Naha, capital of Okinawa, and broadened their bridgehead across the Asato river inside the city almost to the shores of the East China sea.

Nanning, capital of Kwangsi province in Southern China and a former American air base, fell to the Chinese Sunday morning. The Japanese had captured the city last November to complete a land corridor from Korea to Singapore, but withdrew apparently to conserve their strength for battles nearer their homeland.

Other Chinese troops were threatening Hengyang in western Hunan province, 250 miles north of Canton. The Japanese also were withdrawing in this sector.

In the Philippines, the American 32nd division captured a strategic hill and sealed 75 Japanese-infested caves in the Santa Fe area north of Balet pass in northern Luzon.

American troops on southern Mindanao, southernmost of the Philippines, fanned out in pursuit of Japanese forces fleeing into the hills in the interior.

condemn the county dog warden, Harry Riffe, if he see a number of dogs running loose. The dog warden, Dr. Blackburn stated, has 400 square miles of territory to cover. He cannot be in more than one place at one time. If there are loose dogs try to pen or tie them up and then send for the dog warden. He will come as soon as he can pick them up. It does little good for someone to report that there is a bunch of dogs around someplace and then expect the dog warden to be there before the dogs move some place else.

To lick rabies in the city and county health officers will need the cooperation of everyone, the health commissioner declared. He asked dog owners to "keep your dog where it belongs; have him inoculated if he runs loose; if he shows signs of illness keep him tied up and away from children.

A dog that is rabid will bite someone he knows and normally minds as fast as he will bite a stranger, Dr. Blackburn said.

that the big four have resolved the veto question. His speech will be broadcast nationally and short-waved to American troops overseas.

The new interpretation of the Yalta voting formula, incorporating some last-minute suggestions made at Saturday's big four meeting, will emphasize that the formula itself remains unchanged. It reiterates that the big five must be unanimous in any decisions involving the use of force to deal with disputes.

The somewhat protracted discussion of the veto question threatened to delay the windup of the conference, which had been tentatively scheduled to close on June 6. The conference schedule had called for completion of the work of most of the committees by last Saturday. But many of these were slowed up because certain of their decisions were dependent on outcome of the dispute over the voting question.

will be lifted. What and how to produce will be left to the people who make and the people who buy. Noting that temporary dislocations would be inevitable during reconversion, he declared:

"Our economy is a jigsaw puzzle. The pieces of the jigsaw will move into place best if we can give people scope and leeway—with a minimum of rules, regulations and production controls."

He recalled, however, that producing the weapons needed to defeat Japan still was the top job and that WPB would retain all controls necessary to complete it.

On the small business front, Secretary of Commerce Henry A. Wallace has made public a report which he calls "a magna charta for the small business man."

The report, prepared by a committee of businessmen working under Wallace's commerce department, proposed tax reductions and government-guaranteed long-term loans for smaller business.

It called for frequent studies of economic matters affecting small business and the production of manuals to assist the smaller concerns in "the general field of management aid."

Wallace, who said he had "a few reservations" about some of the tax proposals, generally approved of the report. "I am in hearty agreement with the committee's findings," he said.

In general Wallace praised the report as an effort to show "how small business can survive and prosper in America and how, in general, the free competitive economy can best be helped to function more effectively."

CHARTER APPEAL MADE BY TITO

their word, to keep that word which they gave in the Atlantic Charter that every nation would have the right to decide on its own destiny itself."

The Moscow blast against the American press handling of the Trieste issue came from Yakov Viktorov, writer for the Communist party newspaper Pravda.

He accused the New York Times, the Baltimore Sun, the Washington Daily News, the New York World-Telegram, the Hearst press generally, and the London magazine, economist, of publishing "provocational headlines and reports."

"The discussion over Trieste opened the gates for those who oppose collaboration," said the Pravda writer. He said the "most shameless campaign" would "sow the seeds of future conflicts."

Viktorov, apparently reflecting the Moscow stand on Trieste, wrote "it's the usual practice that troops which expel the enemy from territory occupy it, but this by no means determines the fate of these lands."

He said that since the Yugoslavs had liberated Trieste they were entitled to the fullest consideration by the Allied Mediterranean command, but instead "the campaign was begun against Yugoslavia."

A dispatch from United Press Correspondent James Roper with the Eighth army disclosed that American troops have withdrawn from the town of Tarnova, seven miles northeast of Corizia, to ease the situation there.

Roper said when the Eighth army made its "peaceful penetration" eastward last week, the American unit went through Tarnova and established a roadblock east of the town. The Yugoslavs objected and asked the Americans to withdraw by noon Thursday. The Americans did not meet the deadline, but they did withdraw later to a line just west of Tarnova. The Yugoslavs kept the town.

Two tractor-trailer outfits collided on Route 23 Saturday. Barnie F. Whitley, Concord, N. C., driver for the Roadway Express company received a slight eye injury when the rear-view mirror on the truck he was driving broke and the glass splintered. The other tractor-trailer outfit involved in the accident was owned by Segal and Sons, Chillicothe, and was driven by Robert P. Fornash, Chillicothe.

Neither of the trucks were seriously damaged, according to the police report.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

Skirts that are worn with sweaters in combination are usually wool or part wool. To wash they should be swished or squeezed in cool, ample suds. Avoid rubbing. Repeat in a second fresh suds working the lather into the soiled spots with the fingertips. Rinse at least three times in lukewarm water, handling gently all the time. Squeeze out excess water, blot in a bath towel, and hang by the band until almost dry. Press with a warm iron, using a press cloth. Hang up immediately to let the rest of the dampness evaporate before wear.

BRITISH POLITICS

THE art of governing a free country is a good deal like driving a fence post into the ground, and trying to keep it there, with a lot of other fellows coming around every little while and trying to pull it out. Eventually the pullers are likely to beat the pounders.

The British government especially seems like that, because its system affords freer play among the pounders and pullers than ours does. An American President is sure of at least one four-year term, whereas in the English system a prime minister may be ejected at any time by an adverse vote in the House of Commons.

Winston Churchill, tough old-timer, has made a great record in handling the recent European war, and his fame may last long. He has wanted to see the Japanese war through, along with us. But he rates as a "conservative," and the big German war is over, and the British Labor Party is coming up strong again. Apparently there will be another election in England soon, and the Laborites may win.

The nation and world can stand it now, if things go that way, although it might interfere with British help for us against the Japs.

FOOD FOR ALL

PRESIDENT Truman has moved to hasten the sending of civilian supplies to the liberated nations of western Europe. This is a task by no means new to Americans but historic in its present scope. In a time of great distress and scarcity of living essentials over perhaps half of the world, our nation is moving through its government to ease the hunger and save the lives of perhaps hundreds of millions. Along with the food will go medicine, clothing and other necessities.

This is not charity, and should not be thought or spoken of as such, either at home or abroad. Of those to whom much has been given, much is expected. The great world grows small now. Food is produced and transported more readily. It is simpler and more natural than it used to be, to provide people with things they need.

We can even imagine a time, possibly only a generation or two from now, when food may be provided and fairly distributed for the whole world family.

A man from Mars might think, from general observation, that cigarets make the world go round.

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, May 28—Doubt this at your own risk, the inside unpublished figures on American war production are running daily now only eight per cent under the same days of last year when our output for Europe was at peak.

There are multitudes of military reasons for this phenomenon. An uncensorable (I hope) one is that a complete change of wardrobe will have to be furnished each one of the soldiers removed from Europe for the Asiatic front.

People never stop to think of this. I know I did not. Yet the heavy woollens with which our armies in Europe were clad for the winter-spring drive on Hitler, and even for summer wear there, are unsuitable for Japan where the weather runs about like Washington. This requires expansion in textile production.

When massive items of this expanding nature are balanced against the cutbacks in tanks and heavy goods (but not munitions yet) the average runs to the slight cut of eight per cent.

I suspect, furthermore, the administration is holding back on cuts wherever possible. The Army, once bitten on cutbacks last summer, leans toward cutting practically nothing. The economic directors are not inclined to resist Army tendencies much because they are trying to promote an orderly transition to peacetime goods to avoid unemployment.

Thus despite all you hear about the annual war cost rate being reduced (as proposed from around 90 billions to 70 billion dollars for the Jap war, daily cash outlays from the treasury are still running so high that you must buy bonds in customary quantities—or more.

Mr. Churchill's paltry scalp (paltry refers to what is on it, not what is under it) has been overdue for cutting by the laborites. They could hardly wait until the war was over. For more than a year there has been literally no authority on British politics here who would give Churchill a chance for re-election. Yet I would like to place a small bet at appropriate long odds or the statesman who has spoken the most beautiful prose during this war of any political leader in all history.

I suspect Mr. Churchill will outlick his opposition. He has already begun. While the liberals have been panting for an election, they did not want it as soon as the one with which Churchill is providing them. They desired delay until fall so they could campaign for six months. Churchill has cut their campaigning possibilities to a little more than a month by designating July 2.

Their campaign slogan that they can deal better with the communists also may not be the best possible choice in view of developments of Russian foreign policy which are antagonizing people of democratic beliefs.

Britain went to war to defend Poland, for instance, and a deal upon Moscow's position on the subject would repudiate Britain's primary war purpose.

Churchill has chosen the flush time of victory, before the glory of war success fades, to face his opposition, and thus he

Rheumatic Fever Damaging To Condition of the Heart

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

RHEUMATIC fever is a disorder which recurs and each time a new attack develops there is further danger of permanent damage to the heart.

It has been well known for years that infections of the nose and throat, especially sore throat and tonsillitis, frequently occur just before an attack of rheumatic fever.

Because of this, it has been common practice to remove the tonsils and adenoids in patients with rheumatic fever during the period when the disease is not active, in the hope of decreasing the number of attacks of sore throat and tonsillitis, and thus keeping the rheumatic fever from flaring up.

Cause of Rheumatism

The exact cause of rheumatic fever is not known. There are some who have the idea that it is produced by a streptococcus germ.

In rheumatic fever there is fever, often pain and swelling of the joints, and damage to the heart due to inflammation of the valves and heart muscle.

In tropical and sub-tropical areas of the world, that is, in hot and very warm countries, the streptococcus germs do not thrive. Hence, rheumatic fever does not occur very often in these areas. It is for this reason that physicians, in order to keep attacks from occurring, sometimes send their patients to tropical areas. This method of prevention has been found fairly effective but, of course, it is limited, due to the expense involved.

A different type of prevention has been by means of the use of the sulfonamide drugs. It is known that small doses of these drugs given regularly are helpful in preventing nose and throat infections. Tests have been made on large groups of men in the Army and Navy, and it has been found that the giving of sulfonamide preparations has reduced respiratory diseases as much as 80 to 90 per cent, and streptococcus infections 85 per cent. The number of rheumatic fever cases also was reduced greatly.

It is suggested that, when a patient recovers from an attack of rheumatic fever and is free from fever, swelling and pain in the joints, and other symptoms, that the administration of the sulfonamide drugs be started and continued at intervals for at least five years and even longer in young children. Some patients have been reported to have taken the drug daily for a period of years with no harmful results. Of course, such treatment should always be carried out under the direction of the physician.

It would seem that this method of preventing rheumatic fever is quite worth while and may do much to prolong the lives of those subject to this type of heart disorder.

SYNOPSIS

TERRY ARNOLD, a young Vermont newspaperwoman, has written a fairly successful novel. To gather material for a second book she has gone to the Argentine, her subject matter to be the wealthy playboy set of that Latin-American country.

FITZ TURNER, a New York columnist in love with Terry, has vainly advised against the trip.

DON DE VERA is an Argentine newspaperman who mistakes Terry for a MISS AINSWORTH, a Boston heiress.

CHAPTER TWO

FOR ONE painful instant Terry's eyes refused to focus on the figure coming through the revolving door. She was conscious only of the throbbing beat of the rumba, the muffled roar of a lifting plane beyond the glass walls of the tearoom and the rhythm of her own ringing words.

"If a woman comes through next, I go home, but if it's a man, I stay . . ."

Then the enveloping haze around the fateful person slowly faded. Terry's hammering heart seemed to stop.

It was a man! A short, stocky man in loose hanging top coat and slouch hat. Terry never saw him again, but years later she could describe him in detail. She took a deep breath and a tingle of reckless happiness shot through her.

"I love that man," she said. She tipped the astonished waiter and made her way out of the tearoom full of hope, brimming with her own bright humor instead of the sardonic gloom that had filled her when she came in. It was not until she was crossing the vast airport again that any misgiving assailed her. Nothing had changed, really, she rebuked herself, except that she had tricked herself into doing a completely mad thing. It was idiotic to be happy about it.

Perhaps, she calmed her conscience, she couldn't turn in her ticket so near plane time. Then she would have to go home. She dug into the dark recesses of her handbag and brought out the small envelope. Her hand trembled noticeably as she slipped it through the polished brass grillwork. "Could I get my money back?"

The man gave the ticket swift, professional glance, and pulled open a drawer.

"Certainly. We have people waiting for cancellations on that flight." His skilled fingers raced through crisp new bills, shoved a pile of them under the grill to her.

Terry heaved a grinning sigh. "You know, you're contributing to infantile delinquency, don't you?" she murmured as she stuffed the bills into her bag. She left the puzzled Latin and went on to the baggage window.

The dark-eyed attendant here remembered the beautiful, joking Norte American in pants. He grinned sunnily at her.

"Your luggage we are just taking now to the plane."

Terry put down her baggage check on the metal counter. "You can bring it back then, please," she said. "I'm not going."

She reflected humorously, while waiting for her cab at the front entrance later, if all the puzzled Latin she had left in her wake in the last few minutes could be laid end to end . . . She didn't finish the thought because her gaze had jumped to an embarrassed stop.

A few feet away from her, also waiting for a cab and now staring at her with rebuking suspicion, were the three newspapermen.

She could have read their minds at 20 paces. So she was taking the plane, was she? Why, the chattering little double-faced, press-dodging Got-rocks! (Or the South American news-hawk equivalent.)

Her gaze moved on vaguely. Maybe they wouldn't follow it up. But, as she hurried across to the approaching cab, she realized they were moving to intercept her. De Vera, the tall dark one, bowed.

"You are NOT taking the plane, Senorita?"

Terry tried for a bright, casual smile. "I've changed my mind."

Three pairs of dark eyes smiled at her inscrutably.

"A woman's privilege, you know," Terry argued.

"But naturally," murmured De Vera.

The driver slid Terry's bag into the cab, climbed back behind his wheel, and raced his engine impatiently. Terry got in quickly and one of the newspapermen shut the door.

"Where, Senorita?" The driver was painfully twisting his fat neck half around.

The three newspapermen lounged against the cab and grinned at Terry maliciously, waiting for her reply.

"Drive on," said Terry desperately. "I haven't decided."

De Vera gave her an understanding beam and leaned toward the driver.

"The Plaza, of course, Pedro," he said; "and drive carefully." The cab pulled away from the curb with a jerk and Terry sat back violently. She righted herself again, indignant and amused. She would have to tell him where to go. The Plaza was fantastically expensive. But, she hesitated. Her hand was resting on the roll of bills in her handbag. She was gambling, wasn't she? If she didn't win on the race tomorrow she'd be broke anyway. Abruptly the comfort and luxury of the Plaza seemed infinitely desirable. She sat watching the glittering shop fronts, the cabarets, the cinematographs whirl by and before she could overcome this last temptation, they had pulled up into the portico where a large doorman in moss green livery generously swirled with gold braid, was opening the door.

She smiled at the imposing doorman. If he only knew, she thought, what a familiar figure he was to her. She had scuttled behind him often in her sports coat and walking shoes, slipping into the hotel for an hour of eager watching and eavesdropping in a frantic effort to understand and exploit the smart, cosmopolitan Argentine set that made this their headquarters when they came in from their estranizas. But she had never met even one.

As she followed the boy with her bag across the vast lobby, she felt sobered. She wouldn't meet one of them now. She was throwing her money away. Why she asked herself fiercely as she kept on walking toward the desk, was she so stubborn? A single comforting thought came to her. The desk was thronged with people. The night before the race. But of course the hotel would be filled. She would still be saved from her mad action.

And then she saw De Vera. He was draped in nonchalant fashion over the black marble desk while his companions slouched comfortably in nearby chairs.

"For a moment you had given us the slip," he smiled pleasantly.

She was glowering at him when the clerk thrust the pen into her hand. "You have a reservation, naturally?" he purred.

There was a glint of relief in Terry's eyes as she assured him she did not. He frowned. Terry felt happier. "Well, if you haven't anything—"

It was then she saw the swift look that passed between the clerk and the newsmen. The clerk abruptly beamed at her.

"By the great good fortune we have something left I am assured would please the senorita."

Terry could have happily choked each of the three benevolent newsmen. She signed her name in bold letters, but the clerk was prepared for a nom de plume. He merely exchanged a fresh look with the newsmen and, as he called up an attendant to escort her to her room, handed Terry a racing form. The senorita might like this.

De Vera followed her to the elevator. "Perhaps," he murmured, "she would give him a tip on tomorrow's race."

Terry smiled grimly at him. "I'm playing a LAST CHANCE," she said cryptically. "You might try it to win." She stepped on the elevator and as it shot up she glanced at the racing form to hide her amusement at his puzzled look. And then her eyes stopped on a line. "Ultimo Ventura." It meant "last chance!"

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

"The Authority on Authorities"

NOT A LEAD DIRECTOR

ONE OF the working tools of the expert bridge craftsman is the conventional meaning attached to a business double of a slam contract. It informs the partner that the normal lead is not desired, but that a different one, of the suit which otherwise would be considered the worst possible lead, should defeat the contract. That does not apply, however, except to doubles of a slam. The double of a lower contract merely expresses confidence in the side's ability to beat the contract by normal defense, and is in no sense a lead director.

West, a relatively recent recruit to the ranks of contract players, had heard about the use of a double as a lead director. He decided that East was asking for the lead which ordinarily is the worst suit of all to choose against the kind of bidding done by North and South—the suit bid by the dummy. So he led the diamond Q, and thereby "spilled the beans."

South took that trick with the dummy's A and led the spade 3. East came right in with the A so he could promptly return a diamond. He was sure that West would not have led that suit unless he had a singleton in it, and was shocked when South got a discard on the lead instead of West ruffing it. Winning that in the dummy, South then scored two more trumps, led to the club A and used diamonds to discard all of his own losers except one club. Consequently he made an extra trick, losing only one trick in each black suit.

If West had made the natural lead—what he should have done under the circumstances, following the virtual command of the doubler to do what the doubler expected—he would have chosen a heart, either the A or the fourth-best 8. That would have given the side two tricks in hearts, plus one each in the black suits, making the very thin double pay a dividend, a small one, but nevertheless a dividend.

Here's Why Army Won't Bomb Truman Would Accept French Hirohito, Jap's "God-King" Aid in the War on Nipponese

Special to Central Press

WASHINGTON—You can bet your bottom dollar that the Army Air Forces will not do anything to harm Emperor Hirohito even though its B-29 superfortresses may destroy the entire city of Tokyo.

Some elements are clamoring for the emperor's hide on the grounds that he is the defiled fountainhead of the entire Japanese military organization and in the Army's view, that is quite true. But military men point out that Shintoism, Japan's religion, and Bushido, the Nipponese military code, derive virtually all of their power from the emperor.

In the Army's book, Japanese peace proposals can come quicker and with much more authority if the emperor's person is secure than if he is killed, and Americans are left to fight a fanatical, leaderless people.

The Army, on its record, has no love for Hirohito. The Japs have admitted on several occasions that B-29 bombs have dropped close to the palace grounds. Those have been dismissed by the Army presumably as reminders to the Jap deity that he is not immune from an American bombardier's fancies.

Every imperial edict out of much-bombed Tokyo is watched closely by the Army for any direction Hirohito might give to Japanese intentions during the remainder of the Pacific war.

PRESIDENT TRUMAN has made it clear that he will accept the aid of France in the war against Japan wherever the armed power of the rejuvenated French empire can be used to shorten the conflict and save lives.

French Foreign Minister Georges Bidault has offered aid on land and sea, and despite the desire of some Navy high-ups to make the struggle as much an American show as possible, the offer has been taken in earnest.

French troops probably will be held until the time comes to drive the Japanese out of Indo-China. But when the hour arrives, French polius will be assigned to spearhead the job. Until then they may be held in reserve.

In Indo-China French forces could join hands with the French underground and with friendly natives to whom the De Gaulle government has pledged autonomy within the empire.

American seapower is so great in the Pacific that even the British navy is scarcely needed in the ocean war, according to military observers who say it is hardly likely that France's formidable fleet will see Pacific action.

French warships are considered by observers to be more suited to police Atlantic and Mediterranean areas.

THE OFFICE OF WAR INFORMATION has just what the doctor ordered for the sick German nation. Germany is going to get a huge dose of some of the things Dr. Joseph Paul Goebbels didn't tell it. Such as the atrocities in concentration camps.

The OWI is going to blanket the "Vaterland" with reams of copy, radio speeches and films about the "American Way." By that time, OWI feels that the Germans will see the light.

SISTER ELIZABETH KENNY, Australian nurse noted for her treatment of infantile paralysis, will get a chance to express her views before a congressional committee, thanks to a clever parliamentary maneuver by one of her admirers.

Rep. Donald L. O'Toole (D) of New York, attempted unsuccessfully for weeks to obtain the consent of the House rules committee to have her testify concerning alleged discrimination by the medical profession against her treatment.

Furthermore, the committee pigeon-holed his resolution on an investigation.

O'Toole turned the tables, however, by introducing a resolution for construction of a national infantile paralysis clinic in memory of Franklin D. Roosevelt, and having it referred to the library committee, of which he is chairman. Then he announced that Sister Kenny would be a leading witness.

7 COMMON SENSE REASONS

... why you as an American farmer should put every dollar you possibly can into War Bonds in the mighty 7th War Loan.

1 Farmers know that the demand for food is greater this year than ever before. And farmers are doing a magnificent job of producing it. The same urgent need applies to all war goods. For today the cost of the war is greater than ever.

Tons and tons of supplies must still flow to our millions of men in Europe. As you read this, still more tons must be shipped over the huge distances of the Pacific to our troops poised there already to begin the harvest. If we are not to let slip the opportunity to hit the Japs, hard—now we are at last in position to strike—we must supply these men with more of everything—new, harder hitting weapons... more powerful tanks... swift new giant planes—and more of them than ever before!

2 We must make sure that the tragic thousands of our wounded receive the best, most thorough care. That means money without stint—for bandages, for medicines, for thousands and thousands of completely equipped first-aid stations, dozens of hospital ships, hundreds of hospitals.

3 Last year up to this time there had been two war loans. This year, to raise about the same amount of money, the 7th War Loan must do two jobs in one. And so your country is asking you to back up those American boys slugging it out in the front lines—by digging down deep and buying twice as many War Bonds as you did last time.

4 And when you put your money—every cent you can into those bigger bonds in the big 7th War Loan, you'll be doing more than loaning cash for a vital, immediate war need—you'll be helping to fight the inflation that could wreck our nation's whole future. For loose money, in wartime when goods are scarce, tends to "bid up" the prices of things, the same as at an auction. Your War Bond will be safe and money, too, increasing in value until the time when you get back $4 for every $3 you invested.

5 The War Bonds you buy will mature in ten years to send your boy or girl through college... or to provide for your own security, for travel, or retirement.

6 Every $75 you put into a War Bond today will return you $100 at maturity; every $375 will yield you $500. And if you need to get your money back for an emergency—you can do so any time you wish 60 days after the bonds are issued. War Bonds are really the same as a cash reserve for emergencies, except that they increase steadily in value, and because each one is registered, you won't lose your money through fire, theft, or loss of the bonds.

7 In the years after the war, when better-than-ever farm equipment will be available, your War Bonds will be a backlog for you to renew your machinery... to build that new barn... to improve your land.

But meantime—your idle dollars can be fighting dollars... put every one of them into the fight in the big Seventh War Loan!

6 OUT OF 7 WOMEN ARE CHEATING ON RED POINTS

Among housewives recently interviewed, 6 out of 7 were cheating themselves—passing up extra red points because they did not save all their used fats.

These women were saving only the easy amounts from frying bacon or broiling. They were throwing away the little bits... the meat trimmings and table scraps. Yet those small amounts, saved and melted down, can fill fat salvage cans in no time at all! Have you been cheating yourself? Then start saving every scrap today! Our country needs fats urgently to help make battlefield and home-front essentials.

FERRISS HURLS ONE-HITTER TO WIN 6TH IN ROW

Reds And Braves In Split; Cards Lose Twice To Lowly Phillies

NEW YORK, May 28—Morton Cooper's American League jinx still plagued him today—his fourth hit shutout debut with the Braves rated only second billing in Boston because the incredible Dave Ferriss of the Red Sox topped that performance with a one-hitter.

Cooper always has had trouble with the American League in World Series and all-star games, so it was no surprise that even with a 4 to 0 triumph over Cincinnati he was hexed out of the headlines by Ferriss, who gave the White Sox just one dinky single in winning, 7 to 0.

Ferriss lost out on a no-hitter only because Outfielder Bob Johnson barely missed making a shoe string catch on Tony Cuccinello's hit. Only three men reached base, the others on a walk and an error, and two were expired on double plays, so Ferriss faced only 28 men. It was the sixth straight victory and the fourth shutout for the ex-air force corporal, who has allowed just three runs in 54 innings since joining the team a month ago.

He has topped all records in both leagues for rookie pitchers over a comparable period and at his present pace of .50 earned runs per game may break the major league mark of .90.

set by Ferdinand Maurice Schupp of the 1916 Giants.

Team mate Emmett O'Neill gave Ferriss a run for his money, holding the White Sox to two hits in a 2 to 1 second game victory. The defeats ran Chicago's losing streak to six. O'Neill had a no-hitter for six innings, but the White Sox got a run without a hit in the second.

Cooper, purchased from the Cardinals last week, worked his fork ball to near perfection against the Reds. Only one player reached third base and he struck out eight. The first four hits of Red pitcher Arnold Carter were doubles, the Braves making 12 hits in all to win easily. Bucky Walters countered Cooper's fine work, winning the second game, 5 to 0, and holding the Braves to three hits, for his best effort of the season.

It was a rough Sunday for last year's champions, both the Cards and Browns losing double headers. The humiliation was worse for the Cards, who lost to the last place Phillies at St. Louis, 2 to 0 and 3 to 2. Charley Schanz won his first game in the opener, giving up just two hits. Charley Sproull and Lou Lucier combined to win the second game, scattering nine hits. The defeats dropped the Cards from third to fifth place.

The Yankees ran their winning streak to seven games and increased their league lead to a game and a half by beating the Browns twice in the rain, 10 to 9 in 14 innings, and 3 to 1 in an eight inning second game called because of darkness.

Three runs in the ninth game gave the Yankees a tie and they went on to win with two runs in the 14th on singles by Oscar Grimes, Frankie Crosetti and Bud Metheny after the Browns scored once in their half. Floyd Bevens outpitched Al Hollingsworth in the second game, Grimes singling home the marginal runs in the fourth. George McQuinn and Boris Martin hit homers for St. Louis and Hershel Martin got one for the Yankees. All were in the first game.

The Pirates deflated the New York Giants in the National, beating the league leaders, 16 to 4, in the first game and leading them, 10 to 5, in a suspended second game, called in the eighth, because of the Pennsylvania curfew. The unfinished game will be completed today. The Bugs made 26 runs and 31 hits in the two games, knocking Bill Voiselle out with four runs in the first inning of the opener as he sought his ninth straight victory. Truett (Rip) Sewell took it easy in gaining his fifth victory, Ernie Lombardi's 11th homer being the only damaging blow. Bill Salkeld got a first game homer and Jim Russell hit a homer and triple for the Pirates in the second game.

The Cubs won and tied against the Dodgers at Chicago, taking the opener, 6 to 1, behind Ray Prim's eight-hit pitching. The second game ended in a 2-all deadlock when darkness halted proceedings in the eighth with Claude Passeau of the Cubs and Vic Lombardi of the Dodgers sharing honors in a tight duel.

The Tigers and Senators divided at Washington, Detroit winning, 3 to 1, behind Hal Newhouse's nine-hit pitching while Mickey Haefner countered with a five-hit 2 to 1 triumph for the Senators in the second game. George Binks' single, a sacrifice and a single by Gil Torres scored the winning run in the ninth.

Lou Doudreau's first homer of the year started the Indians off to their sixth straight victory, 8 to 3, at Philadelphia. Felix Mackiewicz with two singles and a triple also gave Charley Embree solid support for his third victory. The second game was rained out.

THE JAPS, we read, have disguised their subs as islands, complete with trees and brush. A good motto is: When an island won't stand still torpedo it first—then ask questions.

For the sake of posterity, the word "U-boat" should become not only archaic but forever obsolete.

OSU, ILLINOIS WIN TITLES IN BIG TEN MEETS

CHICAGO, May 28—Michigan's Wolverines, who almost turned the Big Ten into a one-team conference, were considerably deflated today as the Western Conference prepared to close out its 1944-45 sports season.

Michigan was shorn of two of its championships during the weekend as Illinois and Ohio State struck to end the Wolverines' sovereign rule of Big Ten athletics fields. Last season Michigan's maize and blue colors swept to seven championships in eight sports, but this year the Wolverines apparently will retain only four of their titles.

Illinois captured the outdoor track and field crown Saturday, ending a two-year Michigan reign, and Ohio State took the golf title after Michigan had won it three years running. Michigan lost its third championship last Fall when Ohio State won the 1944 football title, thereby ousting the Wolverines who had shared it with Purdue the year before.

Baseball is the only sport left on the Big Ten's 1944-45 sports calendar. Michigan, which has four games to play, has won six straight and needs only one more to win its second straight pennant.

SALUTE SAILORS
Four songs and a trio make up the melodious package Dick

The broadcast will salute the U. S. Naval Hospital, Great Lakes, Illinois, and also spotlight a two-way short-wave interview with a serviceman overseas.

Jack Benny and Keenan Wynn, two of the top comedians of the entertainment world, are co-starring in the Lawrence Riley tale, "Please, Charlie," the closing offering of the "This Is My Best" series on Tuesday. The half-memorable, half-mirthful story concerns a playwright who runs off with his literary agent's secretary, then his wife, and finds fame in Hollywood. At the same time, the starving agent is reduced to writing pathetic appeals to his client for subsistence loans.

If you are planning to restyle a garment, better hold material between the hands and give a few gentle jerks. If it gives way anywhere, or shows signs of breaking, it may be better to turn the garment in for salvage than to use it for clothes.

Ted Lewis Park Official Opening Scheduled For Wednesday

BAND CONCERT, SOFTBALL ARE TO BE FEATURED

Playground Equipment To Be Ready For Use On Memorial Day

Most Circleville residents and many Pickaway county residents will stage their holiday celebration Wednesday in Circleville.

Following Memorial Day services in the morning Ted Lewis park will become the center of attraction for young and old. Starting at 2 p. m. there will be continued activity at the park, marking the official opening for the 1945 season.

Residents visiting the park for the first time this Spring will find a new shelter house, lights at the softball field, improved playground facilities, new fences and other improvements at the fast-growing recreational field. For the opening all playground equipment will be in place for the first time this Spring.

The program announced by the park board includes:

2 p. m.—Troop 121, champions of the Boy Scout softball league, against an All-Star team picked from the league.

7:30 p. m.—Concert by Circleville high school band.

9 p. m.—J & K Shoes vs. Bartholow Auditors.

10 p. m.—Lockbourne Army Air Base vs. Circleville All Stars.

During the afternoon other events for children are planned.

The first softball game on the night program will bring together two of the outstanding girls teams in Columbus. On the J & K Shoes roster are several of the girls who played here last year with Kahn Jewelers and Harper Thatcher teams.

The catcher is Florence Willoughby, who has the strongest throwing arm among girl softballers. Pitchers are Pauline (Sells) Martin, Ethelyn Feyh and Norma Buckenberger, among the outstanding girl hurlers of the state. Other names known here are Margie Ryan, Marge Merrick, reportedly the fastest base runner in girls softball, Lib Merrick, Dotty Willoughby and Ruth Sells.

Leading the Bartholow Auditors are Kathleen "Spike" Stiles, catcher, and Pitchers Catherine Voil and Jinny James. The team is new to the Columbus night league but is showing plenty of promise. In a recent game with the Lockbourne WACs the Auditors won 14-0 with James giving only two hits.

Last year the best men's team to play here was the Lockbourne team which edged the Circleville league all stars. This year's team is expected to be just as good.

Booster tickets to help pay for the improvements at the park are being sold by members of the park and softball commissions and players on the eight teams. A prize will be awarded during the celebration.
